has 2,000.

The daily average of receipts at the Hotel Biltmore could not be learned last night, but a representative of the management was authority for the statement that room rentals for a single night amount to about $10,000.

The exact basis on which receipts are to be divided also is in doubt, though members of the committee in charge of the project were pretty sure that John McE. Bowman could not be expected to turn over the entire receipts for the day. Mrs. Ned Arden Flood said that in Boston, where a similar enterprise was carried out, the Copley Plaza Hotel gave up half the receipts, $25,000.
